INTRODUCTION

This is the eighteenth weekly literature report from the Public Health England Behavioural Science Reference Cell. The report aims to highlight a selection of COVID-19 related work in the field of behavioural and social science (mostly) released from the 4th September – 11th September 2020. Please note the report is not a perfect product and the inclusion or omission of a publication should not be viewed as an endorsement or rejection by PHE. Additionally, the authors of this report do not accept responsibility for the availability, reliability or content of the items included in this report and do not necessarily endorse the views expressed within them.

HIGHLIGHTS

As we know how time pressured everyone is at the moment, the authors of the digest have selected three recommended items from the lists below. This week these are:

1. Know your epidemic, know your response: early perceptions of COVID-19 and self-reported social distancing in the United States, Alberto Ciancio et al., PLOS ONE, 4th September 2020.
2. New BPS guidelines to help increase adherence to self-isolation, the British Psychological Society, 7th September 2020.
3. New research shows tracing apps can save lives at all levels of uptake, University of Oxford, 3rd September 2020.
